PHILADELPHIA,

TUESDAY EVENING, JANUARY 8.

VIRGINIA, to wit.
In the HOUSE of DELEGATES,
Friday, December 21ſt, 1798.

RESOLVED, that the General Aſſembly of Virginia doth unequivocally expreſs a firm reſolution to maintain and defend the conſtitution of the United States, and the conſtitution of this ſtate, againſt every aggreſſion, either foreign or domeſtic, and that they will ſupport the government of the United States in all meaſures, warranted by the former.

That this Aſſembly moſt ſolemnly declares a warm attachment to the union of the ſtates, to maintain which, it pledges all its powers; and that for this end, it is their duty, to watch over and oppoſe every infraction of thoſe principles, which conſtitute the only baſis of that union, becauſe a faithful obſervance of them, can alone ſecure its exiſtence, and the public happineſs.

That this Aſſembly doth explicitly and peremptorily declare, that it views the powers of the Federal Government, as reſulting from the compact, to which the ſtates are parties; as limited by the plain ſenſe and intention of the inſtrument conſtituting that compact; as no farther valid than they are authoriſed by the grants enumerated in that compact, and that in caſe of a deliberated, palpable and dangerous exerciſe of other powers not granted by the ſaid compact, the ſtates who are parties thereto have the right, and are in duty bound, to interpoſe for arreſting the progreſs of the evil, and for maintaining within their reſpective limits, the authorities, rights and liberties appertaining to them.

That the General Aſſembly doth alſo expreſs its deep regret that a ſpirit has in ſundry inſtances, been manifeſted by the Federal Government, to enlarge its powers by forced conſtructions of the conſtitutional charter which defines them; and that indications have appeared of a deſign to expound certain general phraſes (which having been copied from the very limited grant of powers in the former articles of confederation were the leſs liable to be miſconſtrued) ſo as to deſtroy the meaning and effect of the particular enumeration, which neceſſarily explains and limits the general phraſes; and ſo as to conſolodate the ſtates by degrees into one ſovereignty, the obvious tendency and inevitable conſequence of which would be, to transform the preſent republican ſyſtem of the United States, into an abſolute, or at beſt a mixed monarchy.

That the General Aſſembly doth particularly proteſt againſt the palpable and alarming infractions of the conſtitution, in the two late caſes of the "Alien and Sedition acts," paſſed at the laſt ſeſſion of Congreſs; the firſt of which exerciſes a power no where delegated to the Federal Government; and which, by uniting legiſlative and judicial powers to thoſe of executive, ſubverts the general principles of free government, as well as the particular organization and poſitive proviſions of the federal conſtitution: and the other of which acts, exerciſes in like manner a power not delegated by the conſtitution, but on the contrary expreſſly and poſitively forbidden by one of the amendments thereto; a power which more than any other ought to produce univerſal alarm, becauſe it is levelled againſt that right of freely examining public characters and meaſures, and of free communication among the people thereon, which has ever been juſtly deemed, the only effectual guardian of every other right.

That this ſtate having by its convention which ratified the federal conſtitution, expreſsly declared, "that among other eſſential rights, the liberty of conſcience and of the preſs cannot be cancelled, abridged, reſtrained or modified by any authority of the United States," and from its extreme anxiety to guard theſe rights from every poſſible attack of ſophiſtry or ambition, having with other ſtates recommended an amendment for that purpoſe, which amendment was in due time annexed to the conſtitution, it would mark a reproachful inconſiſtency and criminal degeneracy, if an indifference were now ſhewn to the moſt palpable violation of one of the rights thus declared and ſecured, and to the eſtabliſhment of a precedent which may be fatal to the other.

That the good people of this Commonwealth having ever felt and continuing to feel the moſt ſincere affection to their brethren of the other ſtates, the trueſt anxiety for eſtabliſhing and perpetuating the union of all, and the moſt ſcrupulous fidelity to that conſtitution which is the pledge of mutual friendſhip, and the inſtrument of mutual happineſs: The General Aſſembly doth ſolemnly appeal to the like diſpoſitions of other ſtates, in confidence that they will concur with this commonwealth in declaring, as it does hereby declare, that the acts aforeſaid are unconſtitutional, & that the neceſſary and proper meaſures will be taken by each, for co-operating with this ſtate, in maintaining unimpaired the authorities, rights and liberties, reſerved to the ſtates reſpectively, or to the people.

That the Governor be deſired to tranſmit a copy of the foregoing reſolutions to the Executive Authority of each of the other ſtates, with a requeſt, that the ſame may be communicated to the Legiſlature thereof.

And that a copy be furniſhed to each of the Senators and Repreſentatives, repreſenting this ſtate in the Congreſs of the United States.

Atteſt,

CONGRESS,

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Debate on Mr. Griſwold's motion.

FRIDAY, December 28.

The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Nicholas) has reſorted, Mr. Speaker, to a very ſingular argument to prove that he and his political friends had no ſhare in contriving this miſſion, and that the Envoy muſt have gone on his own footing. "We," ſaid the gentleman, "have made no uſe of the ſucceſs of this miſſion. We have taken no advantage of what it has accompliſhed, in order to move for a repeal or ſuſpenſion of any of thoſe meaſures which were adopted laſt ſeſſion for reſiſting France." True, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman has taken no ſuch advantage of what has been accompliſhed by this miſſion; and for this he had a very good reaſon, for he well knows that nothing was accompliſhed. He well knows that this weak, ſilly project, produced no effect whatever, and that the few trifling changes made by France, not in the ſubſtance of her ſyſtem, for in that ſhe has made none, but in the mere form of it, in her language, not her acts, either took place, or muſt have been reſolved on, before this wiſe envoy arrived in France. He further knows, though I have not yet heard him acknowledge it, that this change, ſuch as it is, proceeded not from a returning ſenſe of juſtice in the French counſels, but of the meaſures adopted, and the ſpirit diſplayed in this country; meaſures which he oppoſed with all his might, and a ſpirit which he did every thing in his power to keep down. Had he made this change the ground of a motion for reverſing thoſe meaſures, he well knew that the effect already produced by them would have been urged againſt his, as an irreſiſtible argument for their continuation. He therefore, very wiſely, avoided the topic—He has prudently kept ſilence about the effects of this miſſion, becauſe he knows that it had no effect, and if I were to judge of it by its effects, I ſhould content myſelf with laughing at it. But conſidered in its principle, and the conſequences to which that principle leads, it becomes a matter of very ſerious conſideration, and worthy of very vigilant reſtraint.

I muſt now, Mr. Speaker, pay a more particular attention to the laſt ſpeech of the gentleman from Pennſylvania (Mr. Gallatin) and I will begin with the avowal which he aſſerts me to have made, and in which he ſo greatly triumphs. According to him, I have avowed, and thoſe gentlemen with whom I have the honor to act, and whom he is pleaſed to call "my party," have avowed by my mouth, that their object all along has been, and is, to involve the country in a war againſt France, for the purpoſe of cruſhing and deſtroying their political opponents. This is the avowal which, according to that gentleman, I have explicitly made. Let us ſee how it is made out. When I had the honor laſt of addreſſing the houſe, I ſtated "that admitting the French government to have a party here, as it has all along aſſerted, that party, obſerving the riſing ſpirit and indignation of the country, would naturally be led to conclude, that a perſeverance by France in the ſame courſe of offenſive and outrageous conduct, would ſpeedily produce an open war, a natural and neceſſary conſequence of which would be, to deprive France of all intereſt and influence in this country, and to overwhelm themſelves, her partizans, in a ſtorm of public indignation and odium. I farther ſtated, that this party, admitting it to exiſt, would naturally be led, by theſe reflections, to take ſteps for prevailing on France to change her conduct, at leaſt ſo far as to preſerve appearances; and for this end that they would, probably, ſend an envoy, and inſtruct him to hold ſuch and ſuch language." Theſe were the obſervations from which the gentleman has extracted the admiſſion wherein he ſo greatly triumphs, an admiſſion whereby not only I myſelf, but what he thinks proper to call my party, are to be convicted of laboring to bring about a French war! To inſiſt that a French party, if one there be, as the French inform us, muſt ſee its own deſtruction in a war, is to admit, according to this ingenious reaſoner, that another party, oppoſed to this, does wiſh, and has labored for a war, in order to deſtroy it! Really, Mr. Speaker, if this be a ſpecimen of the offenſive war wherewith we are threatened by that gentleman, his attacks will excite more ſmiles than apprehenſions in thoſe againſt whom they are to be directed. Unleſs he can bring better than theſe into the field, this new Hoche, when he has arrived, by ſome accident, within ſight of our coaſt, will find himſelf happy to get back into his own port, even by the friendly aid of fogs and ſtorms.

As to this threat of an offenſive war, Mr. Speaker, I ſhould be inclined to anſwer it in the words of the poet—

"There is no terror, Caſſius, in thy threats,
For we are arm'd ſo ſtrong in honeſty,
That they do paſs us as the idle winds,
Which we regard not."

An offenſive war! That gentleman threatens that he will carry on a defenſive war! I ſhould really like to know what he had been employed about for five years paſt. Has he, or have his political aſſociates, ever omitted any apportunity of making perſonal attacks on their opponents, and imputing every part of their conduct to the vileſt motives? Is it not notorious, that the gentleman from Pennſylvania himelf is more remarkable for perſonal reflections, than any member on the floor, and in every battle of this kind has uniformly been the aggreſſor? Has the houſe forgotten his behaviour to a former colleague of mine, now abroad, whom he firſt accuſed of deſiring and aiming to involve the country in war, and when my colleague denied the charge, told him, in plain terms, that he did not believe him? Has the houſe forgotten how he, on another occaſion, accuſed the ſame gentleman of introducing and ſupporting meaſures by the orders of the executive? It is forgotten how, for two years together, he made perpetual and unproved perſonal attacks on me, when I bore patiently in hopes that they would at length be diſ-continued: And how, at laſt, he went ſo far as to make a formal ſpeech for the avowed purpoſe of proving that no attention was due to any thing which I advanced? Now, when thoſe who ſubmitted ſo long to his attacks find it neceſſary, with a ſlight ſtroke of the hand, to beat him away, he raiſes an outcry, as if unjuſtly treated, and talks of offenſive war! I would adviſe him, Mr. Speaker, to review his forces before he begins the campaign. If he feels ſo much pain from the gentle touches which he has hitherto experienced, let him reflect well before he provokes harder blows, from which he might not ſo ſoon recover.

The gentleman threatens to hold up certain perſons in their true colours, and expoſe them to the public. Whom does he expect to frighten by this menace? Let me remind him before he begins, of an old proverb, on which he will do well ſeriouſly to reflect "A man living in a glaſs houſe, ſhould never throw ſtones at his neighbours." The gentleman's own habitation is exceedingly brittle. A ſmall pebble will be ſufficient to demoliſh it. Let him therefore beware how he raſhly provokes a retort.

On this ſubject of motives, Mr. Speaker, let me be permitted to aſk what deſcription of perſons it is who diſcover moſt foreneſs when motives are even glanced at! Who cry out, and wreathe, and ſhrink with their bodies, even when the finger is pointed at this tender part! Let thoſe anſwer, who have attended to the debates of this houſe.

As to the queſtion of aggreſſion on this ſubject, who can have any doubts that recollects the courſe of events ſince the inſtitution of this government? have we yet forgotten the copious and filthy ſtreams of abuſe habitually poured out upon the private characters of thoſe perſons who have been concerned in, or underſtood to favor, the ſyſtem of adminiſtration adopted by this government; the vile motives of bribery, corruption, ſpeculation, and foreign influence, to which their conduct has conſtantly been attributed? Have we forgotten thoſe letters, written by members of this Houſe, wherein the writer, contrary to what he knew to be the fact, accuſes the Preſident with havnig provided for his own ſon at the public expence; and points out members of the houſe, by name as ſervants of the Executive, acting ſolely from the expectation of reward! Have we forgotten how the gentleman from Pennſylvania accuſed my former colleague of coming with a commiſſion in his pocket, to vote for his own ſalary? A calumny which was inſtantly refuted from the moſt authentic documents. Did not that gentleman, to ſpeak once more of myſelf, lately accuſe me, when I moved for the publication of certain laws, with acting not from a wiſh to diffuſe information, which I had declared to be my motive, but from a deſire to play off a party-trick and draw my opponents into an unpopular ſtep? Did he not even now make a ſimilar charge againſt the gentleman from Connecticut, who bro't forward the preſent motion? And yet, after thus charging members, in plain terms, with the vileſt hypocricy, he makes loud complaints about motives!

Mr. H. then offered to read the letter to Mazzie, as a proof that the moſt liberal and unqualified accuſations, on the ſubject of motives, had long been deliberately circulated againſt the friends and ſupporters of the adminiſtration, but the Speaker declared it to be out of order. And he concluded with repeating the admonition to the gentleman from Pennſylvania (Mr. Gallatin) to reflect well before he commenced a war to which his forces were ſo unequal, and from which he had ſo much more to dread than to hope.

BOSTON, January 1.

We have received by expreſs from Salem, German papers to Nov. 2, brought by a veſſel which arrived there, after 60 days paſſage; and through the ready attention of Mr. Kahler, are enabled to preſent the public with the following Intereſting Tranſlations.—Mercury.

London Gazette, October 21.

Yeſterday Lieutenant Waterhouſe arrived at the Admiralty Office, with a letter from Vice Admiral Kingſmill, incloſing a copy of the Diſpatches of Commodore Warren to him, to wit:

On board the Canada,
Lough Swilly, Ireland, October 16.

SIR,

In compliance with your orders, which I received by the Kangaroo brig, I ſailed with my ſhip, the Canada, of 74 guns, the Robuſt of 74, the Foudroyant of 80, and Magnanime, [illegible] the heights of Archill-head. On the 4th inſtant were joined by the Melpomene, of 44, and the Doris of 38. The latter I ordered to cruiſe between the Iſle of Troy and Roſſes in ſearch of the enemy. The ſame evening were joined by the Amelia, of 44, which had parted with the Ethalion of 38, Anſon of 44, and Sylph of 18, and ſaid that thoſe veſſels had been carefully obſerving the manœuvres of the French ſince September 17. On the 11th, we fell in with theſe veſſels; and ſoon after on the N. W. of us, got ſight of the enemy's ſquadron, conſiſting of one 80 gun ſhip, 8 frigates a brig and a ſchooner. I made the ſignal for a general chace, and to form the line of battle as our ſhips came up with them. Which, however, we did not do till the 12th, owing to a heavy ſea and our enemy's being to windward. Notwithſtanding the ſeverity of the weather, we continued the chaſe through the 11th day and the night. At half paſt 5 o'clock in the morning of the 12th, we ſaw the enemy not far from us.—They formed a cloſe line of battle and advanced on us on our ſtarboard ſide. But we did not meet till 7 o'clock—as the chace had ſcattered my veſſels. I made the ſignal for the Robuſt to lead and engage, which was inſtantly obeyed; and the other ſhips formed after her. The action commenced 20 minutes before 8 o'clock. The Roſſes bearing 15 miles S. S. W. of us. At 11 o'clock the Hoche ſurrendered after a gallant defence. All the frigates at that moment fled. A ſignal was made for purſuing them, and in 5 hours after three of them were captured. The remaining 5 eſcaped for that time. All theſe frigates, as well as the ſhip of the line were new and full of troops, proviſions, ammunition, &c. to forward their deſigns in Ireland. With pleaſure I obſerve, that the behaviour of all my officers and ſailors was ſuch as evinced the warmeſt affection for their king and country. I left capt Thornborough with the command of the Magnanime, Ethalion and Amelia, to take charge of the prizes and conduct them to port. I expect him here every moment. I have the honor to be, &c.

J. B. WARREN.

P. S. The following ſhips were in the battle, viz. Canada, Robuſt, Foudroyant, Magnanime, Ethalion, Melampus and Amelia. The Anſon did not arrive till after the action—as ſhe had, in the chace, carried away a top gallant maſt. I have ordered my lieutenant, Turguand, to take charge of the Hoche.

LONDON GAZETTE, October 23.

Extract of a letter from Sir J. B. Warren, Bart. to Lord Caſtlereagh, dated on board the Canada of 74 guns, in Lough Swilly Oct. 16.

MY LORD,

I HAVE the honor to communicate to you, for the information of the Lord Lieutenant, that on the 12th inſt. I fell in with the enemy's ſquadron, and, after an action, which continued through the whole day, four of their ſhips ſurrendered, including the Hoche of 80 guns, and 3 frigates, the other frigates fled. A brig, with Napper Tandy on board, as I ſuppoſe, was in company—but ſeparated at the beginning of the action. The ſhips taken, had many troops on board—ſhip's neceſſaries and ammunition. A large number of papers were thrown overboard, after they had ſurrendered. I think the fugitive ſhips cannot reach France, as every one was more or leſs injured in maſts and rigging; and a gale which occurred next day, muſt have put them in a ſtill worſe condition for eſcape. They probably will be captured by our Cruizers on the French Coaſt, or by ſome of Ad. Kingsmill's ſquadron on the Iriſh. They threw a great many things overboard at their flight, particularly ſeveral boxes of ſmall arms. I left our prizes in the charge of the Robuſt, of 74 guns, Magnanime, of 44, Ethalion, of 38, and Amelia, of 44.

[Signed] J. WARREN.

LONDON GAZETTE, ſame date.

Capt. Moore, of the Melampus, of 36 guns, on the 13th of Oct. captured on the Iriſh Coaſt, the French frigate Reſolute, of 40 guns and 500 ſailors and ſoldiers. She was in company with the Immortalite, of 44 guns, with 600 ſailors and ſoldiers. She did not get near enough to engage till the Reſolute had ſtruck, after which ſhe ſheered off.

Two Letters are received from Earl St. Vincents containing diſpatches from the Nile to Aug. 25. On that day the boats of the Culloden took the French ſhip Torride of 18 pounders and 70 men, as ſhe lay at anchor under the Caſtle Bequier. Aug. 22. before Alexandria, the Alcmene, took a Packet Boat of 2 guns, and 61 men, from Tolon.

LONDON, October 23.

A letter from Lord Craven informs, that the Melampus had captured one of the frigates, which eſcaped from the late action, which makes the whole number of veſſels captured five. Other accounts add that the veſſels firſt taken have all arrived at Lough Swilly.

In addition to Warren's Official Letter, it appears, by a Communication poſted at Lloyd's Coffee Houſe, at 2 o'clock yeſterday, That the veſſels captured by him had arrived at Lough Swilly and that 3 French frigates have been driven into Sligo Bay.

Liverpool, October 20.

This morning arrived a packet, which left Dublin laſt evening, at 7 o'clock. The paſſengers ſay, that three French frigates had been brought into Sligo.

Dublin, October 18.

Advices received this day from Sligo, ſtate, that three French frigates captured after the late battle arrived ſafe in that harbor.

Glasgow, October 19.

This day a French frigate with only her mizen maſt ſtanding, was brought into Glaſgow harbor, by a Engliſh frigate. In the captured frigate are 3000 men, and in the others of the fleet were 2000. Their commander's name was Hardy. In one of the captured ſhips was found THEOBALD WOLFE TONE, (the founder of the ſocieties of United Iriſhmen.)

London, October 23.

A letter from Capt. Trowbridge to Lord St. Vincents, contains the following;

"The Arrabian and Egyptian workmen having deſerted the French—and the French not being uſed to the heat, could not open the channels from the Nile, by which the ciſterns at Alexandria are ſupplied with water—there is therefore a ſcarcity of water as well as of proviſions, The proviſion fleet, which ſailed from Toulon the beginning of Auguſt, and on which the French army in Egypt principally depended, returned, on being informed of Nelſon's victory."

Letters from Donnegal, of Oct 15, ſay, Lord Bridport had taken a ſquadron from Breſt, conſiſting of 14 veſſels.

IMPORTANT REPORT.

A cartel ſhip has arrived at Dover, the commander of which ſays, that the combined Engliſh and Ruſſian ſquadrons in the North Sea, had entered the Texel, and landed troops, which atacked the forts, while Lord Duncan engaged the Dutch fleet, and that he had ſucceeded in taking a part of it.

Vienna, October 21.

Letters from Meſſina, dated October 10, ſtate, that a veſſel from Alexandria, had arrived there with intelligence, that Buonaparte's army, after a bloody battle, (in which even the victorious Arabs loſt 12,003 men) was reduced to a few thouſand and had fled to Alexandria. Our account (for which we will not vouch*) ſays B. is taken priſoner.—[* Does it not follow that the other part of the intelligence is vouched for.

MALTA.

Advices from Naples of October 20, ſtate, that the lateſt news from Malta was highly pleaſing. The Malteſe are perfect maſters of the iſland, though a few Frenchmen yet remained at St. Elmo. That the knights there had ſent to Trieſt to invite the return of their brethren, who had emigrated ſince the landing of the French; aſſuring them of the eſtabliſhment of the former government.

Paris, Oct. 22.

Off Toulon, on the 11th of October was ſeen 11 ſhips of the line, which, at firſt, were ſuppoſed to be Ruſſians, but afterwards found to be Engliſh.

Our government are more diſpoſed for peace than heretofore—and a majority of our legiſlature are in its favor, ſince our loſs of the battle at Abuckeir near the Nile. We flatter ourſelves and hope it will influence the ſitting at Raſtadt to make the deſired concluſion.

For four days the Redacteur, and all our papers have been filled with the official letters from Buonaparte and Bertheir, with the proclamations of the commander iſſued in Egypt.

By his letters the army was not diſcouraged by the account of the loſs of the fleet, but rather enlivened to encounter all dangers with their officers.

The general's head quarters were at Cairo. Of priſoners he had only a few; but the Camels and Horſes he had taken, were reſerved for an expedition which was a ſecret.

He embraced every opportunity to work upon the people. An air balloon which he ſent up at Cairo, was above the underſtanding of theſe ignorant mortals. They thought him a meſſenger from MAHOMET.

His horſe artillery had created great conſternation.

A meſſenger to one of the Chiefs, bringing an account of a defeat, was aſked, "how large is the French army?"—He took up a handful of ſand, which he threw up in the air ſaying, "There count them."

The general's ſoldiers divide the booty which they took from the Mamelukes; on ſome they have found from 3 to 500 Louis d'o, or the value in gold.

Buonaparte pictures the Arabians as the woſt of beings. In large hordes they ſwarmed like clouds round his army and harraſſed his rear guards. Plundered and murdered every one who fell into their hands. They have not kept their treaty, which he had concluded on the 5th July, with 13 of their Bes. In which it was ſtipulated, that they ſhould give him as many men as were neceſſar to oppoſe the Mamelukes. And, on thother hand, the general had promiſed to give them back, after he had conquered Egypt, all the lands which had belonged to them.

Buonaparte, with theſe 13 cheilks, ſet round a table, where it was further agreed and determined, that he who did not fulfill his promiſe, ſhould incur Hell's flames. Probably the cheilks could not anſwer for what their hordes did.

On the 24th July, Mourat Bey, had a large body of horſe troops and batteries on the Nile, and 10 gun boats. From both ſides were exchanged more than 1500 cannon ſhot. The Turks had already taken 3 of our gun boats; but two of them were retaken and the third burned. After this the army was not interrupted on their march.

On the 21ſt July, before Cairo, we had a battle. The Mamalukes loſt 2000 men killed [as ſtated in a Newburyport paper] Mourat Bey and other Beys were wounded. 400 Camels, with baggage, and 50 cannon were taken. Our army loſt thirty killed and one hundred and twenty wounded. In the night the Beys fled from Cairo & burned their ſhips. The people plundered their houſes, and on the 22d the French entered the city.

The general iſſued two proclamations:

Buonaparte to the Cheilks, &c. of Cairo, dated head-quarters, Gazi, July 21.

"Yeſterday the Mamalukes were moſtly killed or taken priſoners! I am in purſuit of the fugitives. Send me the veſſels on the other ſide of the water, and a deputation, acknowledging you ſurrender to me! Let bread, meat, ſtraw and oats be in readineſs for my army! Be without fear—as no body wiſhes your welfare more than I do!"

Buonaparte to the People of Cairo.

"People! You have done well not to declare againſt me. I am come to deſtroy the Mamalukes—To protect Commerce and the inhabitants. Every one who is in fear ought to remain quiet; and they who have fled may return to their houſes; I ſhall eſtabliſh a divan of perſons, &c.

A third proclamation to the Pacha of the Grand Seignior, declares, he may remain in his place, and have his effects ſecured to him.

Ibrahaim Bey had fled with his family and effects to Salchich, where Buonaparte purſued him; but before the general entered this city, the Bey had left it. Being the laſt where freſh water was to be had.

The Mamalukes have defended themſelves bravely. They are well dreſſed and equipped.

On the 13th Auguſt, when he left this place, he received the unfortunate account of the loſs of the fleet—Having on the 6th July adviſed admiral Brueys to come to anchor in the harbour of Alexandria within 24 hours, if not, to land the artillery, and the effects belonging to the army. As it was the opinion of our engineers, that the road of Abuckir was not ſo ſafe for the fleet. But to his great aſtoniſhment he was apprized, on the 27th July, that the fleet remained there at anchor. He diſpatched his adjutant to prevail on the admiral to ſet ſail, but unfortunately this meſſenger came too late.

The General ſays, under his own hand, "It ſeems to me Ad. Brueys would not ſail for Corſu before he was ſure he could not enter the harbor of Alexandria, or till the army was in ſuch a ſituation that no retreat might be neceſſary. If he has done amiſs he has expiated it by his glorious death. Fate. which has in many inſtances proved our ſuperiority on land—has in this, favored our rivals on the water.—But as great as this misfortune is, it cannot be attributed to the unſteadineſs of luck—It will not leave us! When I arrived at Alexandria I was informed that the Engliſh had been there, with a much ſtronger force than ours. I ventured to land in a gale, and was almoſt ſhip-wrecked in the attempt. When I reached the ſhore, I threw myſelf on the ground, (a ſignal was juſt then given for an armed ſhip, which however, proved to be La Juſtice) I cried out, "Fortune! ſhould thou leave me! No! attend me only a few days longer! I marched the whole night, and attacked, by the break of day, with 3000 men without cannon, or even catridges to our guns. And in 5 days I was maſter of Roſetta and Demenhur which declared me ALREADY ESTABLISHED IN EGYPT!

In theſe 5 days our fleet ought to have been in ſafety from the Engliſh. Let their force againſt us be what it would. But far from it! They remained the whole Meſſidor, ending July 18, expoſed.

They received on the firſt Thermidor, (19th July) from Roſetta a ſupply of rice for two months—The Engliſh ſhewed themſelves in 10 days with a ſuperior force in theſe waters; and on the 29th July, our fleet received information of my conquering and entering Cairo; but when Fortune ſaw that her favors were not regarded, ſhe left our fleet to her own fate.

At Radſtat, Oct. 25, the ſeditious Congreſs was ſtill in ſeſſion. The French Deputies had ſent an expreſs to Paris, for the Directory relative to the laſt propoſitions made to them; and on this advice, probably, hangs the event of peace or war.

The Ruſſian army, which has been marching to the German Territory, has halted to wait the deciſion of the Congreſs. This deciſion is, it is likely, now about to be made.

PASSAWAN OGLOU.

It is but juſtice to ſtate that our laſt information contradicts the former relative to this rebel. We now find him ſtill in power, and it is even ſaid, he has gained a victory over the Turks. The Coalition however between Ruſſia and the Porte, muſt, we think, ſoon operate his ruin.

BOSTON, January 1.

THE FOREIGN NEWS

We this day communicate to the readers of the Mercury is intereſting and correct. It is tranſlated from Hamburg papers four days and Altona papers ſix days later than before received. The tranſlations are made by Mr. Kahler, whoſe faculty and integrity are too well known to permit a ſuſpicion of accidental or intentional error. Theſe accounts confirm our news of Tueſday laſt, in moſt of its items, and contradicts none of them. The total deſtruction of the Breſt fleet bound for Ireland is aſcertained beyond query. Sir J. B. Warren took the Hoche of 80 guns, and 3 frigates—The Melampus took one frigate, 3 were carried into Sligo Bay, and 1 into Greenock, which make the 1 ſhip of the line and 8 frigates. The Hoche is rated in a French regiſter at 130 guns. We have inſerted one article relative to an attack on the Texel, which is taken from the Hamburg Correſpondent, of October 31—The Altona Mercury, of about the ſame date, has a ſimilar paragraph. Britiſh papers have heretofore hinted at a deſign upon this rendezvous of the Batavian fleet—The diſpatches from Buonaparte, &c. are of an ancient date and are only noticed as curioſities. The account from Meſſina, corroborating other intelligence, announcing the French defeats in Egypt, appear, in a degree, warranted by gen. B's own letter—in which he confeſſes the bravery, equipment and enmity of the Mameluks and Arabs. Indeed it may be infered that the Editor of the Vienna Gazette vouches for moſt of the particulars in the ſtatement.—We obſerve nothing contradictory of the advices of the conflagration of the tranſports. The late information on the ſubject, implied that the event happened about the 9th Sept. To ſay the French Gov. is rendered more favourable to Peace by Bruey's defeat, is a bold aſſertion for a Paris Paper—and may therefore be concluded a ſtubborn fact. But they have loſt the opportunity of making a good bargain. In graſping at too much they probably will get nothing. The Germans can find reaſons for breaking off the Negociations at any time.—The German troops are ready, and the Ruſſians at hand to aſſiſt them, in caſe of a renewal of hoſtilities.

PHILADELPHIA,

TUESDAY EVENING, JANUARY 8.

REFLECTIONS,

On a late publication by Doctor Logan.

Doctor John Logan in his narrative publiſhed in the Aurora, and dated the 2d January, ſtates among other things

1. That he did not go to France at the direction, requeſt, or on the advice of any perſon whatever.

2. That he did not act, when there, as the agent official, or un-official, of any man or ſet of men whatever.

3. That he did not carry any meſſage, letter or introduction whatever, from any Citizen of America addreſſed to any citizen or public body in France.

4. That two certificates of citizenship which he carried with him, were addreſſed to no one.

The firſt reflection which naturally occurs on reading theſe facts, reſpects the extreme caution uſed by the Doctor's friends, to prevent the poſſibility of any other perſon being legally compromitted in his miſſion. The ſecond reflection is, why, if the miſſion was innocent and proper, were ſuch ſtudied precautions uſed to ſcreen his friends from a ſhare of the reputation of his miſſion. It is apparent, that the Doctor's friends knew how near a man might approach treaſon, without injury to his neck, in caſe the meaſure ſhould become a ſubject of legal inveſtigation.

It is in no wiſe probable, that ſo ſubtle a conduct, could have proceeded from the mere cogitations of the Doctor's mind, unaided by the repeated ſuggeſtions of men well acquainted with the law and with the conſtitution.

A word or two more particular on what the Doctor ſays.

1. The Doctor ſays he did not go to France at the requeſt of any one. But he does not ſay ſuch a miſſion was not ſuggeſted at leaſt by one of the perſons who furniſhed him with his certificates of citizenſhip, as a praiſe-worthy and philanthropic undertaking for a man of fortune. He does not ſay, it was ſuch ſtudied converſations that kindled up his zeal for the ſervice; and we cannot expect, he will acknowledge, that by this covert mode of proceeding he was induced to propoſe himſelf formally for the Negociator.

2. The Doctor ſays he did not act when in France as the official agent of any man or ſet of men. This is true, for no man, except the Preſident of the United States, could have veſted him with an official character or created him an official agent. He confeſſes, however, that he did whatever an official agent could do, except that of entering into a formal negotiation and treaty.

3. The Doctor ſays he did not carry any meſſage, letter or introduction from any citizen of America addreſſed to any citizen or public body in France. But he does not tell us that he carried no meſſage or letter from any French citizen or French ex-minister or conſul introductory of him and his buſineſs; or that he carried no letter addreſſed to ſome ſuch loſt and degraded American citizen in France as Joel Barlow covering letters which were to open his way to the directory.

4. The Doctor ſays he carried with him two certificates of citizenſhip which were addreſſed to no one. It is to be wiſhed that the Doctor had told us who gave him theſe certificates of citizenſhip. One of theſe certificates his friends inform us was ſigned by the Vice-Preſident. It ſurely does not come within the range of the Vice-Preſident's functions to grant certificates of citizenſhip. Why in this inſtance has the Vice-Preſident usurped a power with which neither the laws nor the conſtitution have veſted him? Was this certificate to be a token or evidence that the Doctor belonged to a certain ſect, and might be ſafely truſted by the Illuminati of all countries (for it was addreſſed to no one); or was it to be in the place of a ſymbol by which the directory might recogniſe him as one of the faithful Americans? It is certainly incumbent upon the Doctor to explain himſelf further upon this ſubject, and lay before the public a copy of the Vice-Preſident's certificate of citizenſhip.

Further, every one knows or has heard of the unexpected, miſterious and ſecret departure of Koſciuſko for France, at or about the time of the Doctor's departure for the ſame country. It is equally well known, at leaſt to many of the citizens of Philadelphia, that immediately preceding this memorable event, the Vice-Preſident was in the cuſtom of making twilight viſits to this intriguer which ſometimes went far into the night. Is it poſſible, now, for any perſon whoſe intellect is not utterly debaſed by the dreadful principles of jacobiniſm not to ſee an evident connection between the Doctor's miſſion and Koſciuſko's departure and arrival in France; and not to think it probable, that the ſecret and real object of the miſſion paſſed not as the Doctor imagined through him but this Koſciuſko who is well known to be the hired agent of France for effecting Revolutions and who arrived in France as ſoon as the Doctor.

Again, the public ought to be informed of two late viſits made by the Doctor, from which they will draw their own concluſions reſpecting this intermedler, and the ulterior object of his miſſion. One of theſe was to Wilmington in the State of Delaware, where the Doctor had an interview with Hamilton Rowan; the other was to New-York, where he ſaw the French ex-minister Genet.

I confeſs when I take a view of theſe circumſtances and the whole ſubject, I have no doubt remaining upon my mind, who was the prime mover in this miſterious and highly criminal transaction; that the perſonage alluded to is the grand culprit and the Doctor, the ſimple inſtrument, who was to be brought before the public to heighten the drama, or conceal the author, in case the play did not ſucceed. If there are yet men who entertain a different belief, they may be compared to the obſtinate old Knight in Rabelais, that every moning ſwallowed a chimera for his breakfaſt.

THIS DAY PUBLISHED,

By WILLIAM YOUNG,

Corner of Cheſnut and Second-ſtreets,

JOAN OF ARC,

AN EPIC POEM,

By Robert Southey; with notes.

"WE do not heſitate to declare our opinion that the poetical powers diſplayed in it are of a very ſuperior kind—Conceptions more lofty and daring, ſentiments more commanding, and language more energetic, will not eaſily be found:—nor does ſcarcely any part of it ſink into languor. as the glow of feelings and genius animates the whole. The language is, for the moſt part, modelled on that of Milton; and not unfrequently, it has a ſtrong reliſh of Shakeſpeare."

Monthly Review, vol 19, p. 361.

A HISTORY,

OR ANECDOTES OF THE

REVOLUTION IN RUSSIA,

IN THE YEAR 1762.

Tranſlated from the French of M. de Rulhiere; With an elegant Head of the late Empreſs.

[The ſecond edition, price 75 cents.]

"The grounds of M. de Rulhiere's information ſeem indiſputable, and his readers appear to have every reaſon to be ſatisfied with his diſcernment, in unfolding the motives and circumſtances that concurred in bringing about this ſtriking event.

"We ſhall only add, that we have ſeldom met with more intereſting original anecdotes, than thoſe that are contained in the little work which we have now reviewed."
